Adam Torres accepts new engagements with Stratus Chamber Orchestra & Colorado Springs Chorale

Denver-based conductor and pianist Adam Torres has accepted two new appointments, Music Director of the Stratus Chamber Orchestra and Artistic Director of the Colorado Springs Chorale, beginning in the 2022-2023 Season.

Adam led Stratus in its most recent concert, For the Love of Music, featuring the music of Ukrainian composer Mykola Lysenko and a world premiere by Colorado composer James David paired alongside works by Haydn, Beethoven, and Vaughan Williams. Torres will join Stratus after a nearly-year-long Music Director search.

Torres assumes leadership as the third Artistic Director in the Colorado Springs' 65 year history, succeeding longtime conductor Deborah Jenkins Teske. The Chorale will be traveling to Normandy, France as the official choir of the ceremonies commemorating D-Day in June 2022.

Maestro Torres joins Stratus and the Chorale with a seasoned history and a diverse skill set in his work as a conductor and pianist. Torres previously served as the Assistant Conductor for Fort Collins Symphony, as a staff conductor for the Denver Young Artists Orchestra, and as Principal Conductor for Loveland Opera Theatre. Other highlights of Adam's engagements as a conductor include Cheyenne Symphony, St. Louis Symphony, Colorado Symphony, and the Cabrillo Festival of Contemporary Music.
